JOY OUT OF GLOOM.

"For forty days and forty nights
I think the rain has fell,
An' how my crops has all been spilled
I really hates ter tell.

"I'm down an' done an' hollered 'Quit!'
Done sold th' mule an' bridle;
The hoe an' rake is in the barn—
The plow's a standin' idle.
"Oh, well—I guess it's for the best—
An' I will stop my kickin'—
Eer 100 million blackberries
Will soon be ripe for pickin'."

DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Was the Reception and Social at the Third Street M. E. Church Last Evening

The reception and social at the Third Street M. E. Church last evening was a most delightful affair in every respect. The Sunday-school room had been artistically decorated for the occasion with daisies, roses, ferns and other flowers, so that it presented a beautiful appearance.

At an early hour a crowd testing the capacity of the room gathered, and while Outten's Orchestra rendered beautiful music the crowd got acquainted with each other and enjoyed a splendid time socially.

At 8:15 the Q. Q. Quartette appeared and rendered in their inimitable style several selections, which put the crowd in a good humor for the evening.

The great event of these social affairs is the reading of the League's Loquacious Literary Ledger. This magazine has come to stay, and each issue improves, so that we may expect soon to see its editors in the front ranks of journalism.

Delicious refreshments were served by the ladies, which was a fitting climax to one of the most pleasant socials ever given in this old Church.

It is the earnest desire of all that these affairs may continue and that each time may grow better.

Badly Frightens Two Ladies, Who Thought it Was Burglars

Sunday night between 10 and 11 o'clock, Mrs. Amelia Bunde, residing at the corner of Second and Short streets, was very much alarmed and frightened by a mysterious racket and noise in her dining-room, and having only the companionship of a young lady, there being no men folks about the house, they imagined all sorts of dire and calamitous things—burglars and whatnot.

The sitting-room is over the storeroom, and the two frightened women sat at the window that they might call some one to their aid.

Mr. Charles Black happening along, was informed of affair, and, being admitted, proceeded cautiously to investigate. Wending his way to the scene of disturbance, he found that the plastering on the dining-room ceiling had fallen off and the dishes on a nearby table had greatly suffered thereby, causing all the racket and almost frightening the wits from the occupants of the house.
